First Preparatory Student (angrily): "If you attempt to pull my ears you'll have your hands full." Second Prep. (looking at the ears): "Well, yes; I rather think I shall."

An Oil City gentleman who recently traveled in Europe said he was at a dinner one day in Paris and while telling a story was attacked with a sudden and continued fit of sneezing. When he ceased a Russian gentleman, another table, named Fitch, asked about and complimented him on his excellent and correct pronunciation of the Russian language.

A well-known Illinois newspaper, the Litchfield Democrat, has tumbled to a prematurely adjourned love affair in Carlinville, in the same State. It is mean enough to publish the following love-letter by a young lady. Of course it isn't meant for us to publish it. "Dear Will--Don't kum to see me any more for a while any way."

Such is the cruelty of Indiana parents. "My boys," said a kind Old City teacher, "If you would be President of the United States, you must be good and studious." "Who wants to be President?" yelled out a young chap from a back seat. "I'd rather be Buller Bill, and shoot an Injun." And the boys all chorused, "There's our sentiments."--Oil City Derrick.

A Detroit has a bright blue-eyed little niece of four years. The other day he paid her a visit, and she, as usual, welcomed him with a fond embrace, coupled with a springing, which, through the room, he presented her with the customary box of sweets, with the question, "Do you love me, little one?"

"Yes, untie, I do always, sure!" she replied. After she had disposed of her candy, she climbed upon her visitor's knee, and, fondling him for a time, she surprised him with the question, "Do you love me, too?"

"The little one paused a moment and then whispered in his ear, 'Well, if you like me, too, then give me all your money.'"

The other day T. G. met an old friend who was formerly a prosperous young lumberman up North, but whose bad habits of drinking resulted as they often do, though he has since reformed and is trying to do better.

"How are you?" said T. G. "Pretty well, thank you, but I've just been to a doctor to have him look at my eyes. He says I must give up my work."

"What's the matter?" "Well, the doctor couldn't give me any encouragement. At least, he couldn't find what I wanted him to find."

"What did you expect him to find?" "I asked him to look down my throat for the saw-mill and farm that had gone down there."

"And did he see anything of it?" "No, but he advised me if I ever got another mill to run it by water."

STATE NEWS. Cumberland. The Clara Friend took Tuesday's blow 30 miles off Portland, lost job and was blown off; had a rough time of it.

Friday night at Mr. and Mrs. Russell of East Desiring was returning home from Mrs. Scott Siddons's entertainment, in Portland, the forward wheel of their buggy caught in the draw of Tuckey's bridge and was wrecked. The spokes dropped out or were broken, leaving the wagon on three wheels. The horse took fright and ran with the bridge. At the former end both the occupants of the carriage were thrown out. The lady was severely hurt, though no bones were broken.

Thursday evening three small children of Mr. Jordan on the lower part of Danforth street, nearly set fire to the house by playing with matches. When they were discovered the carpet and rug were in a blaze and the children were attempting to quench the fire by stamping on the flames. The skirt of the youngest of the trio was just ignited and in another moment would have been in flames. Fortunately the trouble was discovered in time to prevent a serious catastrophe.

The Portland High School Cadets, 30 in number, donned their new uniforms Saturday evening for inspection, at Old City Hall. The uniforms consist of gray pants topped with a cadet's cap (cavalry) trimmed with black, cap, arns and equipments.

At the Reform School, Friday evening the boys were again made happy by an entertainment given by David Blount, Esq., and Mrs. P. P. Bone. The boys were perfectly captivated by the quaint recitations of "Older Crawford," and such rous of incidents and great life "High School Exhibition" is seldom witnessed within those walls. Remarks were made by Col. Parker and visiting friends, and the occasion was in all respects an exceedingly pleasant one. The new Superintendent enters upon his duties April 15th.

A correspondent of the Ellsworth American from Sullivan, says that the "old residents" can hardly realize that this busy town, with its many steam whistles, the boom of almost constant explosions, and the never ending sound of hammer and drill, can really be the old, quiet, peaceful town of Sullivan. The mining regions are alive with the most modern machinery, and the hard labor of the winter is as yet, too early to ascertain the amount of building that is to be done there this season.

Mr. Worcester is preparing to build a cottage near that of Capt. Bennis, and the ladies are trying to obtain money by subscription with which to build a new house for one of the young ladies, hugging her heartily.

"How very affectionate she is," said the lady of the house. "Yes; just like her brother," responded the young lady unthinkingly. Paterfamilias looked up sternly over his spectacles, the young gentlemen blushed and there was consternation in the family circle.

A well-known Harford gentleman was unable to attend the sale of the pews of his church the other day, and he requested a friend to bid in for him a pew for which he had for many years paid fifty dollars. Later he met another friend, and incidentally mentioning that he would not be able to attend the auction, asked his friend also to see to it that he had his old pew as heretofore. The auction took place and the pew was put up. "Fifty-one," said friend number one. "Fifty-one," said friend number two. "Fifty-three," "Fifty-four," and so on; till there had been thirty-eight bids, when one friend, thinking he had gone as far as discretion permitted, stopped, and the other took it triumphantly at eighty-eight cents.

"Put it down for me," he said, and the auctioneer, in behalf of the same gentleman, who had forgotten to tell number two that he had also spoken to number one. The church is so much better off.
